individual objects without resorting to 3D-editors. 3D animation uses surface construction techniques that can be applied to conventional 2D projects. You can also create three-dimensional elements, such as lines, circles and blocks, using the usual Photoshop drawing tools. In this case, images that contain such elements will look as if they were created in three-dimensional space. To create virtual 3D models in 3D Studio MAX the following drawing methods are used

The Object Snap method allows you to quickly create an object based on its contours. The outline of an object is created by drawing a closed contour. An object can be drawn along any curve for which you can specify parameters: direction (forward, backward), curvature (arc, loop, ellipse) and rotation angle. If you don't define an object, an object with a user-specified name will be created in the specified area.

About this task You can use a tracing region or a tracing area to create an object outline. To create an object outline from tracing, you must first specify a tracing region. If you don't specify a tracing area, an object with a user-specified name in the specified area is created.

Procedure In the Tracing Area, click the Select Object button. The list of tracers you can choose from opens. Choose one of the following options In the left panel,
