The album's front cover features a parody of the cover of the original 1975 LP Sugar Hill Records, and the cover of the a recording known as "The Message" by Grandmaster Flash and the Furious Five. In the story behind the album, the group wanted to be the first rap group on Sugar Hill Records, so they designed the cover to look like the cover of the original LP. The album even references the group's performance on Saturday Night Live in 1975. Mentioned in the story, Grandmaster Flash and the Furious Five was inspired by a group of DJs called the Furious Five, who were the first rap group in existence. The album was released in the summer of 1975, just three months after the non-hip-hop related "The Message" album by Grandmaster Flash and the Furious Five. Grandmaster Flash and the Furious Five: This Is It is out 8/13 and the cover art of this nostalgic LP can be found on their website. death, his brother beckoned him forthwith and took him under his own protection, and told him to come to the court of King Arthur, and he did so, and every day Sir Kay watched him and put him in meat and drink. The king held court to inquire of him and consider his case, and then he sent for him, and bade him come to his court and sit among the judges, for that he was the knight of greatest worship in all the land. The knight rode forth to the court and there they had a fair place set by them for the pleading of the case. And there were three knights sitting in the judgment, and he told him to plead his own cause, for he knew he could defend himself best. "I have done you great wrong," said he, "

Gameplay Gameplay of GTA 4 Highly Compressed is very similar to the original GTA 4. The difference is that the game is divided into four parts which can be installed individually, or, as one full game. When more than one part is installed on a single machine, the player must save the game on this which is possible by the game. There is a difference between the single and multiple part installation, when a single part is installed there will be an option to save the game. When multiple part of GTA 4 Highly Compressed are installed, there is no save, and the game is a single game. The game is designed to be played in a single game, because there are many differences between the single and multiple part of the game, such as the story mode, characters, and missions.
