You've probably used the live search already; you might even have used the advanced search features. The live search is pretty easy to use, but sometimes you might need to know more about your search results. Maybe you want to find the time and date that a specific image was taken, or maybe you want to find the place it was taken. Well, you can do that with the advanced search on the live search page. The page is pretty easy to use. You can set the following things; - Take a look at the example above. This is the advanced search in action. You can set so many parameters that will help you find the right image. For example, if you want to find all of the photos of sunsets, you can just search for sunset. - You can also set the time period for a search. In the example above, you can see that the search was set to include all of the images taken in the past 90 days. If you want to find all of the photos taken in the last week, you can set the search for last week. - You can also specify the format of the image. The example above says that the results should be in JPEG format. But you can also search for all of the JPEG images, PNG images, and RAW files. - You can also search by location. For example, if you want to find all of the images from San Francisco, you can just type that into the search box and you'll get an overview of the results. - You can also specify the keyword that you want to find. For example, if you want to find all of the images that include the word "football," you can just enter the word into the search box and you'll see all of the images that include football. Now that you know how to use the live search, let's see the pictures. Features: - 10 high resolution cloud images - You can select all of the images, you can set the search to take place for the past 90 days, you can specify the time period, you can search by location, and you can set the search to include keywords. - The images are high resolution.
