Key points: The Australian Fair Work Commission is not permitted to award equal pay The Australian Fair Work Commission is not permitted to award equal pay The ACTU is calling on the commission to end pay inequity The ACTU is calling on the commission to end pay inequity Fair Work Australia has said pay inequity is not deliberate Key findings from The National Union of Workers (NUW) report in July found 1.9 million Australians were paid less than the minimum wage last year. The ACTU has called on the commission to instead set an award rate that ensures workers are paid what they are legally owed. In a statement on Monday, the ACTU said the Australian Fair Work Commission (AFC) "is not legally permitted to award equal pay". "It is a requirement under the Fair Work Act to make award rates sufficient to ensure employees are paid the equivalent amount to that paid to all other employees," the ACTU statement read. "The ACTU will continue to work with the Commission to improve the pay system and to end pay inequity." 'Act is not working' ACTU national secretary Sally McManus said a series of inquiries, including one by the Auditor-General, had highlighted the gaps in the system. "The ACTU is calling on the Australian Fair Work Commission to close the inequality gap," she said. Ms McManus said "time's up" for the "four-year search for a new" Government agency to fix the Fair Work Act. "This law is not working," she said. "We need an actual reinvigoration of the Labor Government to turn this around." Ms McManus said a 09e8f5149f

------------ The program is advertised as a clipboard repair program. In reality, it is an application which can fix the case of text that is copied or pasted. This program modifies the case of copied or pasted text. For instance, if you select the "standardize" option, when you copy/paste text, the program will change the case to "Starnge Case" (not a typo). Unfortunatly, the program makes an unecessary assumption that the text you are copying to the clipboard is in plaintext format, i.e. not formatted. Text from webpages, for example, will be pasted as is, without reformatting the text. To get around this, you can turn on the "standardize" option. This will reformat the text to remove formatting. However, this makes it so that you have to go through a tedious task, of reformatting text that is on a website. Clipboard Controller Free makes this task simple, by removing all formatting from text that is copied or pasted, and making it easier to find words. Other options include: ----------------- - "Double Space - Fix Punctuation - Fix Typography - StandardizeQ: How can I compare a date to a future date in Teradata? I have a large table that has transaction dates and close dates. I want to pull transactions that are past the close date. I tried using this: select transaction_date, account_id, close_date from transactions where transaction_date > CURRENT_DATE; However, this pulls transactions that are completely in the future. I want to pull out transactions that are in the future but there isn't any. A: In order to find all dates greater than the CURRENT_DATE (there are several examples in the docs), you can use the trunc() function: SELECT transaction_date, account_id, close_date FROM transactions WHERE TRUNC(transaction_date) > CURRENT_DATE; Edit: If transaction_date is a DATE column, then you can use this to deal with special DATE types: SELECT transaction_date, account_id, close_date FROM transactions WHERE transaction_date > TRUNC(current_date) AND transaction_
