1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to a solid-state imaging device such as a CCD image sensor and a MOS image sensor.

2. Description of the Related Art The CCD image sensor has been used in various types of electronic devices such as a digital still camera, a video camera, a scanner, and the like, because of its excellent properties such as a high-speed operation, a high-sensitivity, and a high resolution. On the other hand, recently, the MOS image sensor has attracted attention because it can be manufactured by a simpler process than the CCD image sensor and can be driven by a single power source. In the MOS image sensor, as described in Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2007-295845, for example, a photodiode and a gate electrode of a selection transistor are formed in a pixel circuit. When the photodiode is irradiated with light, a signal charge is generated in the photodiode, and the signal charge is transferred to the gate electrode of the selection transistor. Then, a voltage applied to a control electrode of the selection transistor changes the current value between source and drain of the selection transistor, and the current value is converted to a voltage value by a source-follower circuit formed of a sense amplifier and a reset transistor. Further, in a pixel circuit described in Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. 2005-350581, a photodiode, a transfer transistor, and a reset transistor

ThemeScreensaver is a screensaver theme for Windows. It contains 76 high quality effects that change every 20 minutes. They all have corresponding screensavers. Many of them are from both Cyan and Pure Design. They come in 16 different themes, from simple to very intricate. ScheduleScreensaver is a universal screensaver that can be used with any operating system. You simply create an XML file for each environment you want to use. You can then use the XML file to schedule the screensaver for automatic or manual execution at the scheduled time. You can also choose to display a simple graphic, a pattern, or an image. You can also control the number of repetitions for the pattern. SchedulesScreensaver has everything you need to schedule screensavers on your Windows computer. It includes a great set of visualizations, a fine-grained scheduling system, and many support features. SchedulesScreensaver can schedule screensavers to occur automatically, at a specified time, or on a schedule that you define. You can use it to create schedules for screensavers with a variety of different visual effects. Also, SchedulesScreensaver can run any Windows screensaver you like from a file stored on your computer. You can even run screensavers that you create yourself, or screensavers that can be downloaded from the internet. And, of course, you can schedule those as well. Our FREE preview mode lets you create and test schedules without installing SchedulesScreensaver. Features: Create schedules for Windows screensavers You can schedule any Windows screensaver, no matter how complicated. You can also specify different schedules for individual effects, including repetition counts and delays. Keep track of all your schedules SchedulesScreensaver records all the details of your schedules, including when they were created, how many times they were run, what effects were used, and when they were scheduled to run. You can get a complete report of all your schedules at any time. Set up warnings You can create customizable warning messages that will appear when you attempt to schedule a screensaver that conflicts with one that you already have scheduled. Watch your own creations SchedulesScreensaver makes it easy to create and monitor your own schedules. You can save any screen saver that you create, and you can control the scheduling of any of them. Install SchedulesScreensaver Installing

The letter arrives in the wake of a July 1, 2013, report by the U.S. Department of State Office of Inspector General. (Photo by Alyson Hurt/CQ Roll Call via AP) The Obama administration announced Monday that it will send a letter to Congress that it says is necessary in order to keep the U.S. State Department from slashing its global health assistance. According to the department, the letter details “the significant funding shortfall that the United States is facing to meet core foreign assistance needs,” which “cannot be addressed by ongoing counter-terrorism assistance,” USA Today reported. “It should come as no surprise that years of budgetary mismanagement have contributed to this shortfall,” the letter reportedly states. USA Today reported that the $60 million in funds requested would come from the Department of State, Department of Health and Human Services, and the Department of Defense. The letter to Congress, the report added, was a response to a “routine notification” that occurred when the fiscal year’s foreign assistance budget was submitted to Congress, though it said the letter was submitted “in the immediate aftermath of the Department’s proposed guidance.” A Department of State official reportedly confirmed to USA Today that the letter would be sent. “We are preparing the FY 2014 budget request for the State Department. We are in the process of sharing this request with Congress and we will issue the notification letter once the budget is completed,” the official reportedly said. ADVERTISEMENT A spokesperson for the Department of State told The Hill that the letter is merely a “routine notification letter” in which the department is “preparing a budget request for FY 2014, which includes OIG’s request to reduce overseas health assistance.” “We are working closely with Congress to address
