The subpoenas were issued to 11 current or former regents — members of the board of regents appointed by the university president — "in connection with a pending grand jury investigation," said the person, who asked not to be identified because the investigation was not public. The person could not say whether the subpoenas involved actions by the regents as a whole or by any of the individual members. The regents were served on Thursday by the U.S. attorney's office in Los Angeles, the person said. The university declined to comment on the matter. The subpoenas relate to an ongoing federal investigation of the university's leaders and finances, according to sources familiar with the investigation. The investigation is being led by the U.S. attorney for the Central District of California. Since 2016, the regents' five-member audit committee has been led by former federal prosecutor and Los Angeles attorney, Steven Bailey. Bailey, in an interview with the San Francisco Chronicle, declined to comment on the investigation. The subpoena to regents comes after the university's president, Janet Napolitano, announced in a statement that an external panel will be created to review its external relationships. Napolitano's statement followed several years of revelations
