Transportation authorities had to close down a 350-mile-long stretch of highways leading from Delhi to Bihar state after a 500-foot-high (152-meter-high) boulder was rolled out of a tunnel in the Narkatiaganj district of Jharkhand. The boulder, weighing up to 11 tons, rolled out of the masonry and the abutment on July 7. Despite intense efforts to stop it from rolling, the boulder continued to roll causing traffic chaos. The boulder was initially spotted in the Morjaria tunnel a few days ago. However, the same day, an engineer of the Delhi-Patna section of the Delhi-Bihar Link Expressway, claimed the boulder was a part of the earth-breaking machine, probably laid down to find a way to reopen the tunnel. A tunnel from Delhi to Patna The Morjaria tunnel was shut down after around 40,000 people fell in the water. Soon, the Delhi-Patna section of the Delhi-Bihar Link Expressway had to be shut down too. The Delhi-Patna section was opened up again after three days. Delhi-Patna section of the DBLX was built with an estimated
