What's new in Project CARS - Pagani Edition:

for Battlezone on the PS2 Ever since we first saw that bloody First Person Sequel to Scorched Earth that has long since been lost in the never ending Battlezone archives you guys kept asking for more. Well, Konami has finally released a budget disc which we were able to procure from GamePro. At last your requests can be realised and we can all experience the more basic enjoyable moments of Battlezone: Charging Assault which now look even better as playable copy's.* *get one for me willya? :D Set to loud sound samples from ZX Spectrum album sounds and 160baud digital 8-bit tuneage, the album's self-titled album is, as the name suggest's a bit of a disappointment although its still good. I still respect the people who save pennies and spend far less, that truly appreciates good old 8-bit 8 cylinders, but mostly. If the game could muster the same 'noise' quality and that high fidelity, it would have been faaaaar superior. It is still respectably playable, but that sound quality really brings it to life. Cyanide Sound has some of the most fun 8-bit soundtracks ever. Cyanide Sound videos are very popular. You can find more of Cyanide's [big collection of music from 8-bit games](on their website. The original soundtrack DVD comes with a small booklet with an interview with Director David Perry. Lots of nice anecdotes regarding the development process and such. One of the greatest music goodies from the 80's is finally released! And it only cost 59 psh. This not only includes the OST but also the game. I was really looking for the soundtrack but I could only find a copy of the CD. I checked around at my local game store and it turned out that they kept copies of this sound track. They were price at $30. So for that price I had to order it. Not only it was cheaper than I thought it would be, but it was better. So, this is not just a bunch of music, but a copy of the game itself! And it is FREE! That said, this OST has some of the best 1980's rock in the game. ps. Why don't you like PCs?! It's because all our friends are here, and if you want to use
