[H]appily this one has the possibility of being a little less glitzy and better balanced if the animation is good. So, to the animation ninja (and such a ninja could have a life *if* they're willing to do something, for example, work as a game animator), I suggest and request your $uper freakin' attention. The event is designed to start the summer flagging season on the islands to ensure the autumn recreational fishing season has a good chance to develop before the summer heatwave takes effect. An upgrade on the previous edition of the event, a Seabra's Island Day is now available with new plaid logo, new boat ramp and spacious viewing areas. The seabra's island day is now also the rallying point for anglers on the South Coast Islands and reaches a core community of around 225 anglers. This event is now organised annually and puts the South Coast anglers in with their peers in the mainland fishing communities during the New Year Eastern fishing season. This partnership is an extension of an ongoing commitment to all South Coast communities with Seabras providing a social function each year at the end of the season for all anglers. There are currently 15 islands within the Seabra's Group that are viable for angler access and the new Seabras Island Day is the rallying point for the island communities in isolation and their mainland can't find out the model number. The WD listed by Wistron as the part name and model number is N90EF010S-GS6, which has "N" and "8" in the model number, and model number 8S0J6J5N3M0BBJFF00D. It's the WD eDrive WD30EFRX-68J9-0T0BJF1, which is part number 8.0J9T0. The drive is a laptop drive (portables were still all using hard drives by then). There is a WD logo at the upper left in the firmware list. From what I've read here, this is what you need to do to access the firmware: For a user to access and write to the firmware, they must have a WD drive show up in the "SATA Devices" page and be open for access. If the controller is running 1.7 firmware, you must also have the drive in a SATA port that is available. The drive must be connected to a non-removable SATA port that has a USB enclosure or external USB drive (no, not a WD drive). This drive is being accessed

It brings up a menu that asks "Update Firmware to 1.7?" Yes is an OK button, and "No" is the cancel button. "Yes" is already selected. I press "Yes". The drive goes through several flashing screens and a "Starting" screen, and then it reboots. (You can hear the drive spinning up, and I can hear the fans spinning up on the casing. The screen for a few seconds, and then a blank screen.)
