Nn.. he thought only to keep himself out of danger as he rubbed his shoulder in an attempt to stop the ongoing ache, as he shifted uncomfortably in his seat the train shut its doors and he let a heavy sigh of relief escape from him. A precious moment of rest back on his own; never before had this moment been so welcoming nor had it felt so surreal. A normally familiar and mundane occurrence, now felt like a complicated world of thrilling possibilities, as he watched the transit station outskirts slowly disappear in the distance and his legs as the feeling of a carried back to his room after a long day of work. White House, Main Hall, Top Floor: Around eleven in the evening, sitting at his desk back home, the door to his office suddenly opened as he leaned back in his seat and adjusted his tie; a pair of perfect eyes stared back at him from the other side. "Y-yo.." A step or two away from the door and he faltered and took notice of the stranger, now stood halfway towards his desk and reached out his right hand, which was clamped down on the other half side. The man now stood before him, he had hair like a choirboy's and his smiling face gave off a caring and friendly vibe, yet as he glanced at him there was a purple-colored bruise on his right eyebrow as if someone had been giving him a playful dusting on it. Yuuki followed the mystery man's eyes as he scanned from his left and right, his eyes narrowed as he looked back into them and blinked a couple of times. "Hello?" The man pointedly held the door's handle and nodded to his query.
