Make your desktop look cleaner and more attractive Program list Description: Abilities CCleaner is a freeware system optimization, privacy and cleaning tool. It cleans, optimizes and protects your computer. With its scheduled scans, you can cleanup the Windows registry and remove leftovers of uninstalled programs. Most of all, CCleaner gives you secure, private, fast and easy-to-use management of your system's backups. It's the premier system optimizer for Windows. In many ways, Microsoft Security Essentials (MSE) is a direct rival to Windows Defender, the built-in antivirus scanner. But MSE does have some advantages, one of the more obvious ones being that it's easier to disable. Let's look at how to do that! This fully featured, simple program easily shrinks a partition into a smaller one of the same size, eliminating unused space and resulting in a smaller and more efficient operating system. Get Ready to Use can also recover your lost partition when it is not possible to resize it, even when it has data on it. In many situations you will want to interact with a third-party service from inside your application (such as a database, API, or other remote service). In some of these scenarios you may be tempted to just construct an HTTP request and send it off to the remote service on the other side. While that might seem like a trivial task, that's not really the case. At the bare minimum, the remote service wants you to authenticate with a username and password, either in a header or in the URL. Do you remember those? If you've done any web development at all, you know that the solution to authenticating with the web server is the username and password combination. This is even more the case when dealing with remote services, since there's usually no real way to get the remote service to say "hey, I'll just send you whatever credentials I have stored in a cookie". Instead, you have to pass the credentials in a request or embed them in the URL somewhere, but that can be a pain. Luckily there's a framework to help us deal with that in .NET: HttpClient. HttpClient is the preferred way to interact with remote web services in .NET, since it's consistent, widely supported, and well documented. The easy way to use HttpClient is via a method called SendAsync, which represents an asynchronous request. For example

Detail, simulate Glare reduce... 5/5 Overall Very Good Posted 2 Years Ago Anand Kapoor Senior Windows Surfer Business / EnterpriseQ: How do I properly display an HTML5 video into my page with no autoplay? How do I properly display an HTML5 video into my page with no autoplay? I am trying to build a page that plays a video only after the user clicks on the player. Here is my current code: When I try to load the page the video plays as soon as the page loads. How do I make the video stop playing by default? Thanks. A: I believe that once the video has started playing it will continue to play until either the player is closed, the whole page is closed or the user clicks a link that causes the page to close. If you want to stop it playing after the user clicks on your page you will need to attach some code to that click event to stop the video from playing. Q: MySQL - Current average date range value So I have to output the current month/day average of clients from an attendance table. This is how the table looks client_id | session_id | date | value ----- 1 | 1 | 01/01/2016 | 0 1 | 1 | 02/01/2016 | 0 1 | 1 | 03/01/2016 | 0 1 | 1 | 04/01/2016 | 0 1 | 1 | 05/01/2016 | 0 1 |
