The Quran is a primary tool for Muslims, in a number of ways. Writing a theology book for Muslims that makes no mention of the Quran is the greatest sin for them: for them it is not an act of intellectual cooperation but self-contradiction. It is the case that the Quran presents a theology for Muslims and it is written with the intention to be the basis of all doctrines: to be the most basic source of revelation for Muslims. Islamic scholars have studied the Quran in great detail; it has occupied a prominent place in their writings for centuries.
