You can of course already use the iPad Pro as a hardware keyboard to type long documents but having a stylus to draft or load a thumbnail to your photo library and click with a single hand is a huge timesaver. It's an amazing first for Adobe and the iPad Pro. We hope it turns out to be as must-have as the iPhone for creativity among artists and designers, and that Adobe continues to develop more apps. While we were fond of the iPhone's camera for its simplicity, the iPad Pro is now the industry standard for a number of reasons.

A few weeks after the iPad Pro came to market, our colleagues in the technology company Adobe Creative Cloud came to us with a similar product for the iPad and we started testing it. We love it. When we were in the editing process with the Master Collection, Creative Cloud testers were uploading and sharing files at the rate of 95GB per hour. We were uploading 78GB per hour on the iPhone, iPad Pro and MacBook Pro.
