quests,.Phase II study of gemcitabine in patients with squamous cell carcinoma of the head and neck. Gemcitabine (Gemzar) is a new fluorinated deoxycytidine analogue that has shown activity in metastatic head and neck cancer and demonstrated a biologic activity through its incorporation into DNA and ribonucleotide reductase and the inhibition of ribonucleotide reductase. Based on these findings, we initiated a phase II study of gemcitabine in patients with advanced squamous cell carcinoma of the head and neck. To determine the activity of gemcitabine, a total of 63 patients were treated with 1,000 mg/m²/day of gemcitabine over 30 min followed by a 1-hour infusion. The dose was escalated to 1,300 mg/m²/day over 30 min on day 1 and a 1-hour infusion on day 8 and then was reduced to 1,000 mg/m²/day over 30 min on days 1, 8, and 15. Patients were restaged following two cycles (eight weeks) and were restaged every 2 months. Eleven percent of the patients had a partial response, and four (6%) patients had stable disease for a median duration of 2.9 months. Hematologic toxicity was mild to moderate, with 4% of the patients having grade 3/4 thrombocytopenia and 4% having neutropenia.

Myelosuppression was reversible, and no patient developed a severe infection. Based on these data, gemcitabine had modest activity as a single-agent therapy in patients with advanced squamous cell carcinoma of the head and neck. A phase III trial is needed to further evaluate this compound for therapy in these patients.
