It's much faster, loads of power and features, and is great for cleaning up a variety of different images. I've employed Lightroom to reduce the size of my 5.4 pro files and, if I do find the time, to correct larger files, and its been amazing. I would absolutely recommend using Lightroom for the same reasons. If you're looking for the kind of creative freedom Photoshop users rely on with their own tools, you'd find that Pixelmator is an alternative to Photoshop that is free and open source. This is a comment that really got to me: "The biggest mistake is the price tag ($7,999), which makes this product unusable by real non-professionals. It's crazy to pay $7,999 for such a complex product that doesn't even work on Windows! Why isn't it $399 or even $199?" Whilst I have no doubt that a few people paid all that money for GhostScript and Photoshop, it is not necessary to use these tools if you decide to pay that price. If you are to use versions earlier than Photoshop version 40 you need to download the downloader for Photoshop, but nowhere is it mentioned that the price tag for Photoshop is changing.
